

2019-20 Season

Overview

In the 2019–20 school year, the Curtis Institute of Music celebrates 95 years of educating and training exceptionally gifted young musicians to engage a local and global community through the highest level of artistry. “Both a conservatory and a buzzword...known for taking the best music students in the world” (Washington Post), Curtis provides each of its 175 young musicians with an unparalleled education alongside musical peers, distinguished by a “learn by doing” philosophy and personalized attention from a faculty that includes a high proportion of actively performing musicians.

To ensure that admissions are based solely on artistic promise, Curtis makes an investment in each admitted student so that no tuition is charged for their studies.

Curtis students offer more than 200 orchestra, opera, and solo and chamber music performances to the public each year. They hone music advocacy skills through programs that bring arts access and education to the community. And they reach global audiences through Curtis on Tour and weekly live-streamed recitals (Curtis.edu/YouTube).

This real-world training allows these extraordinary young musicians to join the front rank of performers, composers, conductors, and musical leaders. Each season leading opera houses and chamber music series around the world feature Curtis alumni, and they hold principal chairs in every major American orchestra. Curtis graduates are musical leaders, making a profound impact on music onstage and in their communities.

Admissions to the Curtis Institute of Music are based on artistic promise alone. From the hundreds of yearly applicants, enrollment is held to the number of musicians needed for a symphony orchestra, opera department, and select programs in piano, guitar, composition, conducting, and organ, plus a string quartet in residence.

Curtis provides complete and diversified musical training, plus liberal arts courses, to all of its students. Students may pursue a Diploma or a Bachelor of Music degree. Vocal students may also pursue a Master of Music degree or a Professional Studies Certificate.

Community engagement has been part of the Curtis student experience since 2000. In 2014 the school launched a new sequential artist-citizen curriculum to equip students with the essential skills they will need as musicians in the 21st century. At each stage of this sequence, Curtis students work with their peers and community partners in Philadelphia to provide rich artistic experiences through performance. As students develop new skills, they also aim to be a positive force in the communities they serve. Social entrepreneurship and community artist programs at Curtis provide arts access and education in targeted neighborhoods to those who need and benefit from music the most. Curtis students reach an average of 1,500 members of the community each year through these programs.

Curtis Summerfest is a comprehensive summer program held on the Curtis campus, with four distinctive program tracks for young musicians and adult learners. Participants hone their musical talents under the guidance of distinguished Curtis faculty and alumni, explore classical music, and experience the school's unique educational philosophy. Building since its inception in 2012, the Summerfest experience is now sought by some of the most talented young musicians in the country and the world.

Facilities at Curtis are housed in several historic mansions on Philadelphia's Rittenhouse Square that pair nineteenth-century charm with twenty-first-century amenities. In 2011 the school opened Lenfest Hall, which greatly expanded the school's spaces for teaching, rehearsal, and practice and provided student residences and a dining hall.

Financial Support for Curtis was initially provided by a $12.5 million gift from founder Mary Louise Curtis Bok, which launched Curtis's unusual tuition-free policy in 1928 and provided financial support for much of the school's history. In the 1980s, Curtis instituted annual fundraising to help pay a portion of the annual operating expenses. Curtis has successfully completed several endowment campaigns in subsequent years.

Curtis receives annual operating support from the Mary Louise Curtis Bok Foundation, a not-for-profit corporation founded by the Curtis board in 1932 to administer Mrs. Bok's endowment. A joint committee oversees the investments of the Bok Foundation and Curtis endowments.
